

With this nation's focus on monopolies as of late, (e.g. Microsoft and the like) it shocks me that maybe one senator has mentioned America's entertainment cartels, like Clear Channel Productions, which is Viacom, which is Mtv, Vh-1, and thousands of radio stations across the country. Wake up! the average American consumer is fed up with their price gauging! Which is of course, why the 'black market' of file sharing has sprung up. I think it's very patriotic to rebel against corporate tyranny. Capitalism, after all, thrives on competition, not collusion. Our airwaves need more regulation!
